

Get inclusive toilets right

- 👇 Wording: All gender, inclusive or unisex. Accessible if relevant. You may want to indicate which toilets contain urinals and sanitary bins.
- 👇 Pictures: Traditional man/woman signs are falling out of favour because they are so stereotyped. The half man, half woman to represent non-binary people is seen as problematic, particularly if shown with a man and woman rather than on its own to represent an amalgam of people.
- 👇 Particularly problematic: Whatever/whichever signs, especially if they have non-humans on, as they can come across dismissive and dehumanizing.
- 👇 Consult disabled people on disability signage (e.g. a wheelchair doesn't convey hidden disability well). Do not just make accessible toilets all-gender, increasing demand and making disabled people have to queue.
